

MICHAEL MEYER

Michael Meyer's passion for art began at a young age, with an early focus on portraiture. He earned a Bachelor of Science in Art Education from Southeast Missouri State University and worked in commercial art, including roles as an art director and illustrator for magazines, Hallmark, and advertising agencies.

While building a successful career in publishing management, Meyer continued to refine his painting, studying portraiture with renowned artist Richard Halstead and painting with the Plein Air Painters of Chicago.

In 2010, Meyer relocated to New Mexico, allowing him to fully dedicate himself to his art. He has since earned numerous awards in juried exhibitions and continues to create work inspired by the landscape, striving for greater depth, impact, and expression.
